Does your family have cavities? Bacteria are the cause. Treat the bad bacteria with CariFree.

Cavities are caused by an infection of acid producing bacteria on the teeth. The infectious bacteria are transmissible and often affect entire families. Brushing and flossing regularly is not enough to restore health. New research and development has produced products that give dental professionals the power to inexpensively and painlessly test for and treat the bacterial infection that causes cavities.

Brushing, flossing, and an effective diet are all good measures for cavity prevention. But, new scientific studies show that cavities are not necessarily caused by sugar consumption and poor dietary and cleaning habits, but by a family of acid producing bacteria. Once a patient is infected, good oral care habits are not enough to stop the infection and often the infection spreads to other members of the household.

Do you have an infection? Find out in less than a minute! The new CariFree system includes a simple and painless one minute screening test that allows your dental professional to quickly identify an infection of cavity producing bacteria by simply swabbing your teeth.

If an infection is detected, your dentist now has powerful CariFree oral treatment products that can stop the infection and kill the bad bacteria in as little as 30 days and often costs less than a single filling. Treating your family could save money as well as prevent unnecessary pain and tooth loss. CariFree means no more drilling, no more shots, and no more pain.

Cavities are caused by infectious acid producing bacteria and over-the-counter supermarket products may not be enough. A company dedicated to the medicinal prevention and treatment of cavities, Oral BioTech, has recently released the patent pending CariFree system for oral health.
